Welcome to Belize

As the world faces an unprecedented global health crisis, the tourism sector is undergoing a period of prolonged hardship. COVID-19 has fundamentally altered the global travel landscape. In the Caribbean region, where nations are heavily reliant on tourism revenues, the crisis has had a much deeper impact.

Belize is one such nation. The stakes are particularly high in Belize, as the tourism sector contributes 46% of our GDP. Nonetheless, we have proven ourselves to be naturally resilient. So then, what is it that sets Belize apart from other destinations and why should you continue to visit? It isn't just our low population density and top-notch health and safety standards. In an alternate universe that parallels the fast-paced, outside world's hustle and bustle, Belize is a curious place where time dances to a much more leisurely rhythm. It is a place where happy hour is whenever, and summer never ends. The richness of Caribbean cultures mixed with fiery Mestizo zings to create an exotic fusion that can only be experienced here. This is a place where business and pleasure do mix. A destination where socially distancing is a given, as you are surrounded by varying wild landscapes.

The warmth of our friendly people, the language, the laid-back ambiance, majestic ancient sites and activities to enjoy, short distances and the ease of travel, our stellar telecommunication networks, and 21st-century amenities-- all combine to make your stay easy, enjoyable and memorable whether you're looking for action-packed and fun-filled adventures, business leisure, sight-seeing, or pure relaxation. My name is Ted Tejada, President of the Belize Hotel Association. It is my pleasure to welcome you to this wonder-filled place I call home. Belize should always be on your travel list. Your dream vacation awaits.

TED TEJADA
PRESIDENT
BELIZE HOTEL ASSOCIATION

"A destination where social distancing is a given, as you are surrounded by varying wild landscapes."

"Indulge in the scent of fresh, salt air and laid-back island culture."

It gives us great pleasure that you join us as we reopen our doors to the world. Your safety and that of our people is the number one priority. One thing that the COVID-19 pandemic has proven is that, in all aspects of our lives, we should strive to build long-lasting connections with nature, with people, and with self. The perfect place for building these connections is Belize, where physical distancing is a natural occurrence. In northern Belize, tasty cuisine will satiate your hunger and inspire you to be unrestrained to new experiences. In the south, the sound of Garifuna drums will awaken your dancing soul, and the unique cultures will enthrall your mind. To the west, goosebumps will abound as you jump into the shallows and plunge pools of charming waterfalls. In the east, learn about our history at the old capital, Belize City, or dive into the turquoise waters of the Caribbean Sea. Explore the Belize Barrier Reef Reserve System, a UNESCO World Heritage Site, dotted with national parks and marine reserves. The nearby islands of Ambergris Caye and Caye Caulker are enchanting and will captivate you as you stroll down one of their secluded beaches and indulge in the scent of fresh, salt air and laid-back island culture. Do not forget about our magnificent Maya sites, stunning caves, and exotic wildlife that are tucked deep in the rainforests throughout this amazing nation. As Minister of Tourism, Hon. Anthony Mahler, I invite you to take out your brushes of curiosity and start painting your adventure in Belize. We look forward to being a part of your visit to Belize, as you give us this opportunity to remind you why you love to travel and where you want to be.

The Belize Hotel Association Scholarship Fund

This fund was established in 2011 with the purpose to provide educational funding for children of employees working with BHA member hotels and businesses, who are unable to meet financial obligations for their child's secondary or tertiary level education. This year the Belize Hotel Association has financed education for five students across the country of Belize. Thanks to the immeasurable generosity of our members and to the local business community who have donated gift certificates, cash, and gift packages for our raffles and auctions, the Belize Hotel Association proudly continues to support students every year. For more information or to make a donation to the fund, email us at info@belizehotels.org or call +501-223-0669.

Living Heritage

Written by Phylcia Pelayo

What does learning a Creole phrase, eating a puffy golden fry-jack, and dancing to the rhythms of Punta Rock have in common? They are all rites of passage on a visit to Belize. They are also uniquely Belizean and a part of Belize's cultural heritage. A heritage that is complex, colourful and beloved by those that call Belize their home —permanently or for a few days. With 2020 being marked by a global pandemic, Belize remains resilient and vibrant. Off-the-beaten path experiences and once-in-a-lifetime memories are still just around the corner.

The best way to see and explore the heart of Belize is by connecting with her people and cultures. Belize is a cultural peculiarity in Spanish-speaking Central America. While tiny, this English speaking country has a colourful origin story that traces back to the Ancient Maya civilization and British pirates. This is further enriched by the arrival of people across the world to Belize's shores.

However, what you're likely to see on a visit is a colourful mosaic of diverse people, cultures, and traditions. Belize is home to several ethnic groups including the Maya, Garifuna, Creole, Mestizo, East Indian, and Mennonites. While each brings their own unique influences, there are many overlaps that you're likely to experience a bit of each wherever you travel across Belize.

The silver lining though is that there are increasing means to virtually explore and learn about Belize before, during, and after a visit. For example, The Cayetano Gallery, The Art Shack Belize, and Depiction Paintings have virtual spaces to explore Belizean Art. Foodies can glimpse into Belize's culinary scene and explore traditional dishes with a twist by Chef Sean Kuylen.

A photo or souvenir does not fully capture this multicultural splendour.

It is heard in the quirky Creole and Spanish-English expressions as people gather at street corners or catch-up at their favourite food vendors. It is seen in the raw talent and skills of artists and artisans at local art galleries and humble workshops that dot the highways and tucked-away villages. You can feel it at festivities like Carnival, Christmas Bram and Garifuna Settlement Day — where the rhythms, lyrics and dances might not be fully understood, but they are felt by the energy that slowly envelops the body. You can taste it in dishes like Caldo, and Cohune Cabbage that are steeped in tradition, and born from family recipes and ingredients sourced from the backyard garden or at the farmer's market. It may be some time before visitors and locals are able to share in these experiences as before.

You can shop heritage-inspired fashion with local brands like Emilio Perera, and Twig & Pearl. With more artists and artisans propelled to expand their online presence, Belize (her people and cultures) is even more within reach. For those looking to learn more about a particular celebration, craft, or food, the Belize Living Heritage website provides an educational portal. As Belize adapts to a COVID-19 world, she remains resilient.

For over the centuries, it has been the fusion of people and cultures from all over that has become the heartbeat of Belize - one that is strong and dynamic.

Birding Nation

By The Belize Audubon Society

Belize is the birding destination. In fact, we'll go as far as to say that it is perfect for both a novice birder to get their birding beaks wet as it is for avid watchers to see their lifers. With close to 600 species and ecologically rich forests, you are assured exciting sightings all year round. This healing activity is best done in small numbers, ideal for social distancing and reconnecting with nature. All you need is a pair of binoculars, some bug spray and a little patience.

4. Boisterous Yucatan Jays can be seen in flocks north and west of the country. (photo courtesy Francis Canto Jr.)

by OCEANA

On January 14th, 2020, the Government of Belize announced its commitment, by way of legislation, to phase out and eventually ban single-use plastic and Styrofoam products, joining less than twenty countries worldwide who have taken a similar stance against single-use. The initial timeline for the phase-out spanned a twelve (12) - month period with four (4) phases to stop importation, manufacturing, possession, and sale of these products. However, due to the COVID-19 pandemic, the Government of Belize made the decision to extend the phase-out period, pushing back the final date to July 2021. The first segment of the phase-out has since been completed with the cessation of importation of prohibited products in April. The next step in the phase-out is now set for January 2021, with the cessation of manufacturing prohibited products.

Even before the phase-out was legislated, Oceana has worked to support businesses who made it their responsibility to integrate greener practices into their everyday operations. We have created a Green Vendor Registry to highlight these businesses in an effort to make it easier for citizens and visitors to recognize and support these establishments, as well as to inspire others to join. As the phase-out continues, we also continue to advocate for the government to outline adequate standards for 'greener' alternatives to single-use products, as many of these alternatives aren't as green as you think. Oceana has also worked with communities across the country, particularly in San Pedro and Placencia, which are leading the way in adopting plastic-free alternatives.

How can you help while visiting Belize?

It is easy to get caught up on vacation, always being on-the-go often means opting for more convenient options when dining, grabbing a drink, or even picking up some groceries at the local store. The good news is there are small ways you can make a huge impact when visiting Belize.

HERE ARE SOME USEFUL TIPS:

- 1. PLAN AHEAD – try to pack bamboo utensils, reusable water bottles, and reusable bags.
- 2. CARRY YOUR REUSABLE WATER BOTTLE OR TRAVEL CUP – this reduces the single-use cups or bottles you may consume when exploring. Not to mention that a stylish cup will look much better in that #ExploreBelize Instagram post. Many vendors will also happily pour fresh fruit juice into your bottle too, so no fear of missing out.
- 3. SAY NO TO PLASTIC STRAWS – You can travel with your own metal or bamboo straw. Didn't pack your own straw? Don't worry, our locally-made bamboo straws help the environment and make a great souvenir. If you are feeling extra independent, just go strawless!
- 4. WALK WITH YOUR REUSABLE TOTE – traveling can often be unpredictable, and we get that. So whether you are planning to pick up a bunch of gifts for your friends and family back home or just stash a few snacks, it helps to have a bag (or a few) on hand to avoid using plastic bags.
- 5. ASK FOR SODA IN GLASS BOTTLES, NOT IN PLASTIC – Local bottlers provide both options. In our opinion, soda in glass tastes yummier and colder without those pesky plastic toxins.

You can help ensure Belize's government adequately implements this important ban by joining Oceana and following these tips. Make your voice heard and lead by example. Find out more about Oceana and their work in Belize here.

This dive haven turned retirement mecca has drawn travellers from all over the globe to explore its waters and attractions. On any given day, an intoxicating mix of people from all over the country and the world are deposited via water taxi or plane. This increasing blend provides a snapshot to a changing Ambergris Caye. San Pedro and by extent Ambergris Caye has become the most cosmopolitan area of Belize. The constant inflow of fresh faces and new ideas has birthed a blended local culture which is constantly evolving. The “Ambergrans” are very social, dynamic, and progressive. It is common to see a blend of tourists, immigrants (expats), and locals in the same location, often in the same group.

This draw has quietly begun to lure a wider range of demographics to live and work. The characteristics of the typical traveller are changing. An influx of younger, more tech-savvy persons are visiting and relocating to the island from both the mainland and abroad. Lured by the island’s energy and the accessibility of the Internet, cafes are filling up with remote workers. Younger foreigners are finding San Pedro to be a great base with its proximity to the US and vivacious energy. Meanwhile young Belizeans are drawn by opportunity presented on the growing island. As the market shifts, the island shifts with it. Rooftops, lounges, sushi nights, juice bars, sustainability, and authenticity highlight these changes as more amenities become available.

San Pedro 2.0

“La Isla Bonita” is known far and wide as the buzzing little island by the Belize Barrier Reef.

Consider visiting places like The Truck Stop that offers a twist on the food truck concept and quickly became the premier entertainment experience on the island. The Belize Chocolate Company offers world-class chocolates sustainably made in Belize. The Blue Water Grill hosts the Annual Food and Wine Festival with an array of guests and local chefs offering a unique dining experience to an increasingly dynamic diner. Secret Beach has boomed into the picture-perfect daytime escape with waist-deep turquoise water and refreshing drinks. The opening of Alaia heralds a new era of modern luxury targeting the public with luxe amenities like a rooftop pool lounge and a studio/gallery space for artisans.

Manatee Love

9 RULES OF INTERACTION

The Antillean manatee (Trichechus manatus manatus) is the only aquatic herbivorous mammal in Belize's waterways. Fewer than 2,500 adult Antillean manatees are thought to remain in the wild with numbers believed to be declining due to threats such as boat collision, habitat degradation, entanglement in fishing gear, and poaching. Belize is home to the largest population of this endangered species with an estimated population of 800-1000 individuals.

Some well-known manatee hotspots in Belize include the Belize River Mouth, Swallow Caye Wildlife Sanctuary, Gales Point Manatee Wildlife Sanctuary, Placencia Lagoon, Port of Honduras Marine Reserve, and Corozal Bay Wildlife Sanctuary. Being able to experience these charismatic creatures and their behaviours within their natural habitat is one of the most breathtaking experiences one can have on any marine tour. The best takeaway is knowing you did it with minimal impact to the species, as we must be mindful that these aquatic mammals are endangered.

Some ways you can have a low impact on the species during your tour are:

- 1. Ensure and remind your captain to boat slowly within manatee areas and respect slow-speed zones.
- 2. Look, but don't touch manatees. Also, don't feed manatees or give them water. If manatees become accustomed to being around people, they can alter their behaviour in the wild, perhaps causing them to lose their natural fear of boats and humans, which may make them more susceptible to harm.
- 3. Do not pursue or chase a manatee if you see one while you are swimming, snorkeling, diving, paddling, or operating a boat.
- 4. Give manatees space to move. Avoid isolating or singling out an individual manatee from its group and do not separate a cow and her calf.
- 5. Avoid excessive noise and splashing if a manatee appears nearby. The manatee may be resting and may surface without being aware of your presence. Noise and activity may startle the animal awake, which may put it in harm's way if it is frightened and leaves the area.
- 6. If in-water activities near manatees are allowed, use snorkel gear and float at the surface of the water to passively observe them.
- 7. Stash your trash!
- 8. Report illegal or non-compliance of boat captains and tour operators.
- 9. Take tons of photos and memories and remember to share the importance of preserving this beautiful endangered species.

Find Your Workspace in Belize

Written by Chris Moguel, Vista Real Estate

Long commutes, traffic, and full days in the office aren't as appealing as logging into your server atop a treehouse in the middle of a tropical rainforest. Imagine answering emails from the comfort of a lounge chair with a panoramic view of the Caribbean Sea. Your video conference calls won't need background filters, and coffee breaks easily turn into a cocktail recess. The pandemic forced a drastic shift to remote work worldwide. Safety measures and health restrictions kept most of us inside for long periods, turning living rooms into conference halls and dinner tables into workspaces.

Though working from home can have its comforts, taking advantage of the option to travel again makes for a luxurious and exotic opportunity to work from paradise. Belize has a small, English-speaking population scattered among 8,000+ square miles of pristine rainforest, white-sand beaches, and beautiful islands dotting the world's second largest barrier reef. It offers a 'best of both worlds' destination for those who can work remotely and are looking to escape densely populated cities to find their own space in paradise. Many hotels and vacation rentals in Belize have transitioned to welcoming long-term stays, offering discounted rates, and travel options for extended 'vacations'. These range from monthly rates on suites to all-inclusive packages that provide meals, tours, and co-working spaces with services such as laundry and daycare. Broadband Internet speeds in Belize average about 30MB, suitable for browsing, emails, and zoom calls. Add to that mobile Internet access that averages up to 20MB and you'll have the freedom to work from just about anywhere in the country, allowing you to explore your new home away from home while staying connected and getting work done. For something more permanent, the post-COVID market is an opportunity to invest in a vacation home where social distancing occurs naturally. Those looking to relocate and step away from the crowds can find attractive properties for sale or fully-furnished, long term rentals. Vista Real Estate has partnered with a number of providers such as The Belize Collection and The Lodge at Big Falls to offer customized solutions for remote work accommodations and temporary relocation services countrywide. Remote work was a growing trend long before COVID-19, but the events of 2020 have accelerated it to a point where travel executives believe it will remain an integral part of the landscape moving forward. It allows you to work from where you are, no matter the location, and that location can be tucked away in the rainforest of the Maya Mountains or sunbathing on the beaches of Belize. ONE COUNTRY MANY FLAVOURS

Kulcha Kitchen

Belize does not have international fast-food chains and as a Belizean Chef, I personally discourage the influence of foreign ingredients on our menu offerings. It is a rather bold stance to shun outside influences in our food. The stance begs the next logical question, what is Belizean Cuisine? For me, this question needs to be more specific to which region & particular culture we are describing. Although geographically a small country, the people, landscape, languages, terroir, and food of Belize change from region to region. One cannot generalize a menu item showcasing Maya Cuisine without defining which territory the food is from. For example, although corn and beans are the staples, the Maya Yucatec of Northern Belize will enjoy black recado, relleno negro, mechado, chimole, chechac, escabeche, tamales, pipian, cochinita pibil, pebthre, pirixpak, and atole which is very different from the food of the Maya Ketchi and Maya Mopan of Southern Belize whose staples include the cacao (not grown in Northern Belize), jippi jappa, fish wrapped in oja santa, cowfoot or obel leaf in a dish called lancha, and their favorite caldo of annato, smoked pork, yard fowl, culantro and the cock's head for a rich broth! Their sweet corn dessert called cho'qua, tzul, and shutt would be foreign to their Yucatec sisters up North, but this difference is what I embrace as the proud identity and culinary representation of my country. Equally, the Creole of the River Valley of Belize, the East Indian of Southern Belize and the Garifuna, whose simple diet of yellow ginger (turmeric), game meats, cohune cabbage (heart of palm), cassava, plantains, coconut and seafood preparation seamlessly and proudly fits among the ranking category of the world's most celebrated restaurants and chefs. Marketing terminology such as organic, farm to table, sustainably sourced, wild caught & seasonal cuisine naturally describes our food. As an example, if conch, guava and mango are not in season, it can naturally never be on the plate! We cook from the land and the sea. As a chef, I make it my mission to cook only produce from this country with limited foreign influence. Our cuisine is unique, it's exotic and tribal. It naturally promotes wellness using hyperlocal produce sourced from a short distance from my kitchen's door. A simple yet complex broth of freshly squeezed coconut milk, lemongrass, hog snapper, cohune cabbage, turmeric root, basil, habanero, and grated green papaya with toasted cashew nut can be enjoyed from a calabash bowl (gourd). Enjoy it near the smoke of the fogon and clay floor in the village of Mafredi, Toledo District or on a white tablecloth setting in one of the country's top luxury resorts. The cuisine of Belize is much more than rice and beans –it is humble yet worldly. It is locally sourced, naturally healthy, and it comes to you without added preservatives, no stickers, no labels, unfooled around with, and with no suggested expiration dates nor barcodes. This truly defines the Cuisine of Belize, not a pretentious marketing adjective or strategically placed hashtag. Belizean Cuisine represents an authentic and natural way of life - the way nature prescribed. That is exactly how it will remain... traditionally authentic from my Kulcha Kitchen to yours!

Cuisine is the fingerprint of a country. It can expand the borders of its birth, becoming international cuisine with the fusing of several techniques and identities along its global journey. However, a country's cuisine describes the palate of traditions and the story of its people – food is “kulcha”. Of late, there has been a refocus on local and regional cuisine where chefs are now celebrated for cooking sustainably sourced ingredients from within a reasonable radius. These chefs are awarded high accolades and even Michelin stars –to this, I chuckle because Belizean Cuisine has always been exactly that, way before it became a trend!

Chef Sean Kuylen

Welcome to Southern Belize. The southernmost districts of Stann Creek and Toledo house the only Jaguar Preserve in the world at Cockscomb Basin Wildlife Sanctuary as well as the highest peaks in the country, namely Victoria Peak (3,681 ft) and Doyle's Delight (3,687 ft). The south is known for its richness in culture as it is home to much of the country's traditional Maya and Garifuna communities.

Travel with Intention

Belize's natural environment has always been at the heart of its tourism industry. Whether you are coming to snorkel our barrier reef, or tour our Maya archaeological sites, you will be immersed in nature. Belizeans hold immense pride about our natural heritage, and rightfully so. Our barrier reef has been declared a UNESCO World Heritage Site, and is the largest living reef in the northern hemisphere. On land, Belize still boasts close to 60% forest cover, with approximately 40% placed under the National Protected Areas System, making it one of the countries with the highest proportion of territories under conservation action (FAO Global Forest Resources Assessment, 2010). This is why our tourism industry has jumped aboard the global movement of "ecotourism" and "sustainable travel". Preserving invaluable ecosystems that are a treasure trove of green and blue carbon is one of the smartest and most responsible actions a country can take to tackle climate change, our generation's most pressing global issue. Global tourism accounts for almost 5% of the world's carbon emissions, and this is before factoring emissions from accommodations, food and other activities that most tourists engage in while traveling. Here in Belize, many tourism operations are leading the way in regenerative tourism, going beyond sustainability, which minimizes environmental impacts, to actively engage in regenerative actions, allowing tourists to contribute directly to restoring and enhancing Belize's natural environment.

The Belize Zoo and Tropical Education Center (TBZTEC) is a favourite destination for wildlife and nature enthusiasts, where you can be sure your visit will contribute to the preservation of Belize's natural environment. The main attraction is The Belize Zoo, which allows visitors to engage in an unforgettable experience, encountering over 45 species of native Belizean wildlife in their natural habitat. Guests can also take advantage of the range of accommodation options at the Tropical Education Center, nestled in the gorgeous lowland tropical savanna of Belize's Maya Forest Corridor. On-site facilities include a dining hall, pool, natural history library, and numerous interpretive tropical savanna trails, making this the perfect destination for travelers who enjoy a balance of relaxation and enrichment. The TEC is the site for many community conservation engagement programs including the annual conservation camp for Belizean teens, and professional development workshops for teachers and tour guides. The TBZTEC is a member of the Maya Forest Corridor coalition, which aims to safeguard important habitats in a vital biological corridor connecting the submontane, broadleaf forests of the Maya Mountains to the lowland broadleaf forests extending from the Yucatan Peninsula to Belize. The efforts of the coalition help to ensure the preservation of central Belize's natural heritage for Belizean communities and iconic wildlife species including the jaguar, tapir and a host of resident and migratory birds. For travelers coming here to soak up sand and sun, Hamanasi Resort in southern coastal Belize offers luxury by the Caribbean Sea as a part of their responsible, natural and culture based mission. Hamanasi Resort is located in one of the most culturally rich and picturesque coastal villages. Guests can expect total relaxation where on-site accommodations feature sustainable design and energy resources. Hamanasi has its own sustainability program, which includes initiatives that directly impact environmental conservation efforts and habitat protection. The resort ensures habitat protection by the conservation of the littoral forest on their property, which is one of the most threatened types of forests in the world. They have set aside 26 acres of nature preserve, enhancing habitat from ridge to swamp for a host of aquatic and terrestrial species. They are partners with local NGOs such as The Nature Conservancy and the Belize Humane Society to raise awareness and garner funds to promote their efforts. Hamanasi has a long-standing educational program for guests, staff and the local community, which promotes Belizean conservation efforts and sustainability practices. Hundreds of locals have been reached through this social program, which aims to ensure conservation by fostering environmental stewardship in local communities. Initiatives such as "Pack for a Purpose", urge guests to use a small amount of space in their luggage for donated supplies to Belizean community projects. (continued on next page)

Back in the lush, tropical rainforests of Belize, Chaa Creek Resort was founded by a love of nature and guided by the principles of responsible travel. This award-winning eco-resort seamlessly blends affordable luxury with the exquisite natural beauty of the jungle. Guests can enjoy a range of experiences from glamping in the treetops, to elegant cabins with private jacuzzis and butler service. Rest assured that your stay will go beyond the sustainability of best management and environmental practices at the resort. Chaa Creek is committed to continuous support of local communities and the environment through initiatives like the "Belize Foundation to Conservation", a legally registered NGO, which was established to promote environmental education, cultural awareness and sustainable practices. The Chaa Creek Natural History Center located on the 400-acre Chaa Creek Nature Reserve has hosted numerous important cultural and ecological exhibitions as one of Belize's premiere environmental education facilities. Chaa Creek has partnered with international agencies to promote research projects that directly impact local and global conservations. These include Howler Monkey Reintroduction with the Foundation for Wildlife Conservation and the Yerkes Primate Institute, Vascular Plant Cataloging and Agroforestry Research with the New York Botanical Gardens, and continued archaeological research with the assistance of Dr. Samuel Connell of the University of California. Eco-lodges like Black Rock Lodge have achieved unparalleled levels of regenerative and sustainable tourism. This off-the-grid experience offers a guilt-free oasis where guests are able to wake up to the symphony of birdsongs and choose from a variety of rainforest tours and experiences. Committed to a focus on nature, wildlife and environmental stewardship, this eco-lodge established a MoSI (Monitoreo de Sobrevivencia Invernal) Station on-site, which is part of an international network of research stations across the northern Neotropics aimed at monitoring migratory bird populations at wintering and breeding sites. The MoSI Station at Black Rock Lodge was first coordinated by the Cornell Lab of Ornithology with assistance from certified bird banders at the University of North Carolina. For the past four years, the station has been operated through a partnership of the University of Belize Environmental Research Institute. During the banding season, guests are able to visit the banding stations where they interact first-hand with researchers and experience bird banding demonstrations and bird photo ops like no other. Black Rock tour guides are among the best, with some even trained as bird banding assistants who contribute to the collection of vital data for the monitoring of global bird populations. This entire eco-lodge operates with an active mission toward sustainability. Black Rock is on its way to Carbon-Negative Certification as its renewable energy system of over 100 solar panels and micro-hydro power plants have produced more sustainable energy than what has been used by the lodge. (continued on next page)

"On land, Belize still boasts close to 60% forest cover, with approximately 40% placed under the National Protected Areas System, making it one of the countries with the highest proportion of territories under conservation action."

The model of regenerative travel in Belize is quickly becoming a positive trend among tourism enterprises, and there are many more examples of tourism leaders making a contribution to conservation. With the world at our fingertips, your next vacation can be planned with intention, to reduce your travel impact and support Belizean tourism ventures who protect and rebuild a resilient natural environment. Now, as a tourist you do not have to choose between comfort and sustainability, and that is the future of travel we should all support.

"As a tourist in Belize, you are able to immerse yourself in all the positive rewards of travel such as experiencing new cultures, broadening your horizons and making lifelong memories while still making active contributions to conservation through supporting enterprises that go beyond sustainable practices."
